

Poland at the 1937 Expo

(Poland represented in Paris World Expo 1937)

The Polish Pavilion in Paris – humble in form, blended into the greenery - was a light structure. Its central point was the monumental honorary rotunda. In the main exhibition hall, made of glass and concrete, four residential interiors were created: a universal interior, a summer house interior, a dining room and a living room. Two modern architects of that time designed it all: Bohdan Lachert and Józef Szanajca.
